

Another SEC Member Resigns For Academic Reasons: Now 3

The Key To A Man's Heart...

Although there are no men in sight, the girls above seem to be enjoying themselves while being rushed by those mysterious brotherhoods of women, the women's fraternities.

Ed Bierbrier, B. Com. 3, announced his resignation from the Students' Executive Council last night.

Bierbrier, formerly representative of the School of Commerce stated that "my academic duties might prevent my giving to the students of Commerce the complete representation they deserve".

In a letter to Stuart Smith, President of the Students' Society and Chairman of the S.E.C., Bierbrier said the following:

LETTER

During the past year I have endeavoured to represent the students of Commerce to the best of my ability on the SEC. Having been elected to represent my fellow Commencemen on the Students' Executive Council I felt it to be a duty to complete this term of office in their best interests and in the interests of Students' Society.

However, upon thinking the matter over, I feel that my academic duties might prevent my giving to the students of Commerce the complete representation they deserve.

I am therefore relinquishing the Commerce seat on the Students' Executive Council and tendering my resignation with my deepest regrets. I want to thank the students of my school for giving me the opportunity to represent them and hope that they have been satisfied during my tenure on the Council.

Smith commented on Bierbrier's decision in a statement released to the Daily yesterday. He said, "I feel that Ed's decision to resign was a very mature move and one made in the best interests of the Students' Society and the students of Commerce he represents."

He continued: "Ed has served his fellow students most diligently during the last few years and we all hope that he will be able to see his way clear in the not too distant future to resume his activities on behalf of the Students' Society."

ELECTIONS

Elections for four open positions on the S.E.C. will be held October 18. Besides the vacancy left by Bierbrier, representatives to replace Cameron Grout, B.Sc. 3, and Sol Polatschek, Eng.Civ. 4, who resigned last week. The fourth student elected will represent the graduate students.

At last week's S.E.C. meeting, the Council approved the motion: "The Council favours a minimum academic requirement for candidates seeking campus positions and further decides to set up a committee of three to investigate a feasible academic requirement."

COMMITTEE

A committee consisting of Robert Carswell, B.C.L.1., Irwin Cutler, B.A. 4, and Murray Greenwood, B.C.L. 3, was formed following the motion. The committee was to report its findings concerning a minimum academic standard for S.E.C. members.

Both Grout and Polatschek resigned before Bierbrier because they were unable to meet academic responsibilities and function at the same time as S.E.C. members. This resignation of three S.E.C. members at once for academic reasons raised the question of an academic requirement for members of the S.E.C.

Police Arrest, Cross-Examine Students Hazing At Varsity

Six University of Toronto students were arrested and examined by Toronto police for two hours last week.

This incident was one of the many that occur each fall as Canadian Universities welcome first-year students to the campus. Stranded late one rainy night on the outskirts of Toronto, the six University College students were spotted as bandits by a deaf watchman and taken to the nearest police station. There, angry plainclothesmen threatened them with up to 14 years in jail for trespassing and causing a public nuisance.

STUDENTS REPORTED

The policemen told the students that they would be reported to U. of T. President Bissell, and the boys claimed, "one of them said, Well, boys, I guess that ends your college careers!" One of the six students — an upper-classman — stated, "That's why we were afraid to report the story till now".

The mixup began when three freshmen in residence "voluntarily submitted" to being pulled out of their beds, blindfolded with towels — and taken on a one-way ride by three upperclassmen.

FRESHMEN DEPOSITED

The freshmen were deposited by their mentors about ten miles from the university in a rainstorm. The three upperclassmen were followed from the spot by a mysterious car which took their licence number and then passed them on the highway. Thinking that the driver of this car was on his way to report them to the police, the upperclassmen took a shortcut to the station and confessed.

The three freshmen had meanwhile flagged down a police car and were returning to the centre of town in it when the police radio announced that five masked, armed, bandits were prowling in the area where they were deposited.

Suddenly the students realized that they were the bandits.

Light was thrown on the matter some minutes later at the police station. Apparently the call had been turned in by the watchman at the Conway Co., a deaf mute who was frightened at the sight of the masked freshmen. The students were questioned for over an hour in order to settle the misunderstanding. No charges were laid, although they were reminded that trespassing and disturbing the public could earn them up to 14 years in jail.

Universities Begin Nominations For Woodrow Wilson Fellowships

Faculty members of major universities in the United States and Canada began yesterday to nominate college seniors for the lucrative Woodrow Wilson graduate fellowships.

The program awards 1000 fellowships for first year graduate study at any university of the recipient's choice in the United States or Canada. Each elected fellow receives a $1500 stipend for living expenses plus full tuition.

Candidates are elected only after rigorous screening and personal interviews by one of the fifteen regional committees of educators.

MCGILL'S REPRESENTATIVE

Professor J.R. Mallory, chairman of the department of economics and political science, is McGill's representative of the foundation. He told the Daily that more than thirty McGill graduates have won the award, eight of them last year. Five winners from other American and Canadian Universities are now studying at McGill.

In announcing the opening of the competition for the academic year 1961-62, Dr. Hugh Taylor, President of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, estimated that well over 9,000 students will be nominated by the closing date of October 31.

SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS

Designed to reduce a nationwide shortage of qualified college teachers, the program is open to college graduates mainly in the humanities and social sciences. Both men and women are eligible, and there is no limit on the age of the candidate or on the number of years he may have been out of college. Those who receive awards are not asked to commit themselves to college teaching, but merely to "consider it seriously" as a possible career.

Almost 90 per cent of all the 1000 Fellows in 1959-60 continued study after the first year, and more than 75 per cent of all Fellows eventually end up in academic positions. On the nominated candidates who failed to win Woodrow Wilson Fellowships more than 80 per cent, went on to graduate school anyway, often with financial help from other sources. He estimated the annual need for new college teachers at 30,000 a year for the next ten years.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation does not accept applications directly from students. Every candidate for the award must be nominated by a faculty member.

Lectures and Fees

Lectures and labs will be cancelled from 3 to 6 pm on Thursday, October 6 for the Founder's Day Convocation.

Students are reminded that Friday, October 7, is the last day on which courses may be changed. Forms for change of course may be picked up at the Assistant Dean's office in the Arts Building.

From the Ivory Tower

Inside Fraternity Rushing

The death on Friday of Michael Levine, a first year Commerce student at Sir George Williams University, during freshmen orientation, has provoked a good deal of discussion and anger in Montreal. City newspapers pointed out that McGill University had previously banned all types of hazing in 1950, declaring them "childish". Even our freshmen engineers are merely subjected to the most innocent type of orientation, and not at all strenuous.

What these newspapers fail to realize, however, is that among certain societies in McGill "hazing" is still very much alive. In fact, it forms a very important part of their programme. I am referring, of course, to the fraternities.

Most of the fraternities on our campus incorporate in their pledging programmes a final orientation period just before initiation. This period, is called variously "hell week or week-end", "initiation week-end", "orientation week", etc. and generally runs from two to three days. It is, of course, a compulsory period (i.e. participation in it barring illness or valid excuse, is a requirement for membership in a chapter.)

The activities in which pledgees engage during this period make those which are associated with Michael Levine's death seem tame in comparison. Pledgees are often kept awake for most of, if not the entire, night. While most fraternities have at least had the good sense to banish all forms of paddling, many still resort to strenuous kinds of horseplay such as running laps around Molson Stadium at 3:00 in the morning. Calisthenics at the same hour are hardly conducive to good health. Nor is tumbling down stairs on one's belly.

Tampering with the pledgee's diet is more than innocent fun. Some years ago one chapter had four or five cases of stomach nausea on their hands after one bright chap had mixed a potion of soap, baking soda, vinegar and ketchup, which pledges were required to carry in their mouths while sliding up and down the stairs on their bellies.

But there have been possibilities of far graver incidents than this. Stories have been reported in the U.S. of prominent fraternities which came within an eye-shadow of losing their charters; after accidents occurred in cars driven by the pledges during all-night vigils on hell week.

It seems to this writer that the tragedy at Sir George might serve as a warning to fraternities on our campus. If a short distance of running and a five-foot height, coupled with all the excitement which "hazing" brings, could stop the beating of a weak heart, how much more likely is "hell weekend" to do it? After all, in an organization where candidates for membership are often striving to be recognized as "one of the boys", might a pledgee not be hesitant to separate himself from his friends because of a weak heart? And is everyone always aware he has a weak heart?

The argument is often put forth that this initiation weekend plays an important part in unifying a pledge class. Besides, one is reminded, there are certain worthwhile activities carried on during this week-end, such as social-service projects.

This writer would guess that the real rationale for such a week-end is neither of the foregoing, but rather the desire on the part of fraternities to offer a memorable period to initiates, a period of excitement, which serves as a climax to the long weeks of pledging. At any rate, it seems to me that if unity is required, more positive types of programmes, such as those of social-service, might provide a similar result. And a "week-end of hell" is certainly not required for this type of worthwhile activity.

A number of years ago, most of the fraternities abandoned as part of their "initiation weekend" programme what had become known as the "drop-off". This was a "game" in which the brothers motored the

Political Polemics

Monkey - Business

B. M. POST

The municipal political kettle is now at a slow boil, and by the time voting day rolls around, on October 24, much steam will have been generated. Various personalities and factions are already jockeying for position, in the hope that membership in the disorganized political pork barrel, commonly known as City Council, will be theirs.

Former premier Antonio Barrette appointed a commission several months ago, headed by municipal judge Paul Champagne, to study the situation and make recommendations to be implemented at a special fall session of the legislature. Its preliminary report was recently made public, together with an admonition to the new Liberal government that its final report, due December 31, might radically alter the provisional suggestions.

Heeding this, the government bill tabled last month at the special session summoned by M. Barrette's successor, Premier Lesage, merely calls upon the electorate to elect sixty-six councillors, in two categories, and a mayor, for a two-year term. A referendum will be held at the same time to determine the fate of "C" category councillors, who are appointed by various public bodies.

Several aspirants have already tossed their hats into the mayoralty ring. The incumbent, Hon. Sarto Fournier, has decided to run again. His party, the Greater Montreal Rally, is now all but defunct. Council leader Lucien Croteau, its founder, stated at a press conference last week that the G. M. R. would sponsor no candidates. Ex-mayor Jean Drapeau, in last week's political version of musical chairs, found himself disowned by the party of which he had been honorary president, the Civic Action League. Not at all dismayed, M. Drapeau founded his own group, the Civic Party of Montreal.

Ralph Cohen, a Montreal lawyer, is another candidate for the mayoralty. His reform platform is not unlike many other proposals of the past, most of which can still be found in City Hall's political pigeonholes.

To cap things off, Dr. Gerard Albert, a dentist, feels Montreal has decayed long enough. However, he has not suggested anything concrete to fill the cavity.

The task facing the voter is formidable. He must choose between individuals and groupings which have for the most part concerned themselves with petty politicking, rather than with the welfare of Montreal as a whole. The parking lot situation is a perfect case in point. One existed at the corner of Peel and Sherbrooke, for many months, in clear violation of zoning bylaws. It was necessary to obtain a court injunction to compel the city to enforce one of its own bylaws before the lot was closed.

Drury's Restaurant, a gourmet landmark and an important tourist attraction, was hurriedly expropriated and demolished to extend and widen Osborne Street. For the past six months it has been the site of a parking lot.

A master plan for Montreal's re-development is as mythical as the unicorn. Romeo Mondello, the city's planner, tacitly admitted this on the summer TV program "Let's Face It." After three hundred years of existence, Montreal still does not know where it is going.

Our civic government seemingly does not attract men with the necessary qualifications and public spirit. Why? Are the salaries too low? We have not heard councillors complaining that their remuneration was insufficient. Are the hours too long? We think not, as many still find time to manage their own businesses. Perhaps the answer is that responsible and conscientious citizens are repelled by the idea of participating in the dirty business of politics as it is played at City Hall. If this is true then we must provide the necessary atmosphere and conditions whereby municipal politics will be elevated in the public view. This does not involve trite and meaningless election rhetoric. This does not involve personality or group smearing. This does not involve pious wishful thinking. This does not involve interest in municipal politics only at election time. It is a year round affair. Montreal is a dynamic and prosperous city. It needs vigorous and imaginative planning. It requires efficient, patronage-free administration. The past has not provided these things. We hope the future will.

Most National Clubs Members of New ISA

The International Students Association founded last spring to represent the national clubs at McGill, has a full schedule planned for its first year.

The Students Executive Council established it to co-ordinate the activities of the national clubs. Before, these clubs could not coordinate their programs, and as a result, many activities of different clubs occurred at the same time, causing poor attendance.

The ISA also will present authentic club budgets and an aggregate budget of the Association as a whole. Previously, the SEC had no real idea of the needs of these clubs, and so gave disbursements with no organized scheme.

MAIN PURPOSE

Its main purpose will be to further better understanding and promote better international relations among the students. Other colleges of comparable size have a permanent professional staff to advise the foreign students in their activities and the ISA intends to perform the same function at McGill, in a non-professional capacity.

The chairman of the organization is Zafar Khan. The treasurer is George Okiwe and the secretary Lucy Aiello.

Following the official inauguration, the first major event of the year will be a speech by Mr. R. Krasilnikov, the Third Secretary of the Soviet Embassy, on Friday, October 28, in the Union Ballroom. The topic of his address will be "Peaceful Co-existence: A Cornerstone of Soviet Foreign Policy" after which there will be a question period.

SCHEDULED EVENT

Another scheduled event is a talk by Mr. Van Eysen the Information Advisor of the Office of the South African High Commissioner, to be held soon after, in the Walter M. Stewart Room of the Union. His topic will be "The Economic Development of Racial Groups in South Africa" and a film will illustrate his speech.

On New Year's eve, the ISA will sponsor an international dance, to which everyone is invited.

Representatives from 16 national clubs have been sent to meetings of the ISA, and to seminars held during the summer. These clubs are considered members pending ratification by their rank and file membership. Other clubs may join by sending representatives before ISA's official inauguration some time next week, or after that by a two-thirds majority vote of the members.

Besides the 16 national clubs, the WUS, the International House Committee, the Women's Union, the SEC, the Pan-Hellenic Council and the Inter-Fraternity Council are also represented on the ISA.

"East, West Meet" Topic Of Dr. Fried

McGill's Dr. Jacob Fried will speak on "Cultural Types: 'East and West in Israel'" at Hillel House, today at 1 pm. His speech begins a series of noon-hour lectures dealing with Israel.

Fried, Assistant Professor of Anthropology, spent several months of last year in Israel studying the pattern of immigrants, in particular those from Oriental regions, to trace the degree of cultural differences between the Jewish peoples in Israel today.

Many foremost students of the social sciences have taken interest in this problem.

The chairman of the series on Israel, sponsored jointly by Hillel and the Student Zionist Organization, is Robert Birnbaum.

RE MAIL

Pending the establishment of permanent addresses, a good deal of student mail is addressed "c/o McGill University". Anyone expecting mail, should call the Mail Room, Room 105, Dawson Hall.

Activities Preview

McGill students will be given a preview of campus activities tomorrow night at 8 pm when Activities Night opens in the Union.

SEVENTY CLUBS

More than seventy clubs will set up booths for this gala Publicity Night. Posters, pamphlets and exhibits will set forth the aims and programmes of campus clubs and societies.

Students will be able to learn about the activities sponsored by each club and sign up with the organizations which interest them.

DISPLAYS

Students will see displays for activities ranging from rock climbing to rocket building and will be entertained by Jazz, Choral, Folk Singing and Film societies.

Admission is free and refreshments will be served.

pledges blindfolded in groups of two or three to points of twenty to fifty miles from the fraternity house. The object was to see which pledges could show the most initiative and inventiveness in finding a means of transporting themselves back to their houses. They might be allowed 25¢ as an aid.

The "drop-off" was abandoned when one pledgee from an American fraternity was reported to have fallen into an abandoned well and lost his life.

One might argue that a death of the kind which Michael Levine suffered might have occurred anywhere in this helter-skelter age of ours — in a roller-coaster, looking down from any high altitude, fear from a speedily onrushing automobile. However true this may be, it does not refute the following major point in this article: any mishap occurring during a "hell-weekend" which could in any way be traced to (and not necessarily caused by) the activities of that week-end could easily prove to be the undoing of a chapter. University authorities (especially at McGill) would not hesitate to withdraw the charter of a fraternity on provocation of this kind, and rightly so. Is "hell-weekend" so important that it is worth a risk of total chapter abolition?

Would it not be wise for the fraternities, for their own protection, to abandon "hell week-end" just as they abandoned the "drop-off"? It is time for a reconsideration of this initiation programme.

COED COMMENTS

by BERTHA KALIFON
Women's Sports Editor

In a broad sense of the word apathy means indifference. Applied to college it connotes a complete lack of interest in campus affairs, diminished enthusiasm in activities, and the death of the rah rah college spirit at football games. This "no-care" attitude has prevailed in student activities recently and now encompasses the women's athletic scene. Last year the attendance at some of the athletic clubs was atrocious. To cite some examples, McGill was not represented at the Intercollegiate Archery tournament. The low calibre of the players who tried out was given as the reason; that is, there were not three girls, on campus capable of competing in archery at the intercollegiate level. We wonder how the University of Toronto, O.A.C., McMaster's and Queen's were able to muster up a team. Perhaps apathy has not headed west, yet. Thus far, this year, five girls have played archery. This is not a very impressive figure.

ARCHERY NOT ALONE

Archery was not the only club affected by "indifference". In two tournaments held by the Bowling Club seventeen girls entered the first, a paltry four competed in the second. A "SkiDay" organized by the Ski Club had to be cancelled because of the lack of response.

The Golf Club was forced to extend its deadline for the Tournament trials because there weren't sufficient players participating. It's the same story this year. Only four score cards were handed in at date of this writing and the deadline for the Intramural Tournament trials has been extended to Wednesday of this week.

This year twenty upperclass women played in the tennis tournament; the figures for the Freshette tournament were grim. Out of the several hundred first students, only seven participated in the competition.

Other clubs ran into difficulty selecting their intercollegiate teams because of the small numbers to choose from. In some cases the coach was compelled to place all the intramural participants on the intercollegiate teams.

SOLUTION DIFFICULT

These are the statistics. If we could only find a concrete reason for this poor participation the solution would be very simple. However this is not the case. The Women's Athletic Association is an efficiently organized group. Every aspect of "selling" athletics to the coeds on campus has been taken into account. Meets and tournaments are arranged in such a way that the times don't conflict with any campus-wide activity. The presidents, managers, of each club, and the publicity chairmen print posters and flyers so that there is an up-to-date record of the athletic scene. On the RVC notice board, times and places of all events are posted and the Daily supplements this with a Women's Sports Schedule. In addition, athletic timetables are posted weekly in the main university buildings, residences, and fraternities.

Time consumption has been blamed as one of the reasons for poor turnouts. However, most sports are not of more than two hours duration and the seasons are completed at least three weeks before exams allowing adequate time for study.

Some have argued that they wish to try a sport but have never played it before. Each club provides a professional coach who gives individual attention to all those who require it.

ATHLETIC PREVIEW

The Women's Athletic Association is holding its annual Athletic Preview on Wednesday October 5 3:30-5:30 pm in the Currie gym.

The purpose of the preview is to introduce to the freshettes and upperclass women the variety of athletics offered by the Association. The presidents and coaches of each club will be present to explain their sport to all aspiring athletes. Slides of past years activities will be shown and the cheerleaderettes will put on an exhibition of two or three cheers. This is an excellent opportunity for McGill's women to join a club and reactivate the women's athletic scene.

! A REGAL APPEAL !

It isn't often that noble types apply for help to the general public. But le Baron down at Le Chateau, he of Victoria Square, has a bit of a problem.

BRIEFLY — he is peeved at the same old advertising approach forced upon him by his sales chamberlains. So, (with furrowed brow) he has decided to rest his case with the people, recognizing, in so doing, that much good (occasionally) is to be derived from that quarter.

ACCORDINGLY — Le Baron authorizes the student body to attempt to rewrite and recreate the above advertisement. He is of a sensitive nature, and of an historical bent, and would be pleased to see imagination at work. He dislikes contemporary hucksters. Lace and hose are more his meat, and so he naturally leans toward bygone periods (sigh). Thus he would enjoy seeing an advertisement conceived and written in the grand manner of Shakespeare of Stratford, or as intended for publication in a 17th century journal for Gentlemen. Ringing phrases a la Plato are not amiss, and for those with a leaning towards economics, a choice bit of Marxist rhetoric (le Baron is a broad-minded chap) will not land the writer in the dungeon (promise). You name it — any period, style or conception, with or without artwork. Le Baron is open to suggestions.

The add which most pleases le Baron will be reprinted and publicly acclaimed, and the creator will be rewarded by choosing either the blushing hand of his daughter in marriage or his choice of any quality garment at Le Chateau, FREE!

HURRY! Le Baron's patience is thin.
